The national per capita income is an indicator of average per capita availability of goods and services on the national level.

(b) The State-wise information of per capita net State domestic product at current prices for the year 1986-87 is available only in respect of 12 States and 2 Union Territories. The per capita State domestic product at current prices for the year 1985-86 is however available in respect of most of the States. The all-India estimates are prepared by using all the data available to Central Statistical Organisation from various sources. The State Governments prepare these estimates based on State-wise data available to them. Therefore, all-India estimates and State-wise estimates are not strictly comparable. Even between the States, owing to difference in methodology and source material used, these estimates are not comparable. Subject to these limitations, the following States had per capita income lower than the all-India per capita net national product during 1985-86 (As per pre-revised series of NAS).
